

History Line — C3 Framework Correlation (page-by-page)

What the seven History series teach, and on which page

The standard for History

History is aligned to the C3 Framework for Social Studies (NCSS — College, Career, and Civic Life), the inquiry-based framework most U.S. states use, and to the National Standards for History (NCHS) with its five Historical Thinking skills. As a second, universal claim, every book supports Common Core ELA — Reading Informational Text. All 49 books across 7 series share one structure, so they build the same historical-thinking skills, each series leaning into a different disciplinary concept.

The shared structure -> what it teaches (with pages)

Feature in every book	What it teaches
The timeline page — all 7 subjects placed on one timeline	Chronological thinking (NCHS Std 1) and C3 Change, Continuity, and Context
The profile pages — facts, “When,” context per subject	Historical comprehension (NCHS Std 2)
The discussion questions (open, beyond-the-book)	C3 Dimension 1 (developing historical questions) and Dimension 2 (causation, perspective, argumentation); NCHS Std 3 (analysis & interpretation)
Word search / crossword	Common Core ELA vocabulary (not a history content claim)

Verified page structure (read from the approved interiors): two layouts across the line —

- 45-page books (the Ancient Civilizations series): timeline p.4; the seven profiles on p.8, 12, 16, 20, 24, 28, 32.
- 46-47-page books (all other series): timeline p.5; the seven profiles on p.9, 13, 17, 21, 25, 29, 33.

The full per-book confirmation is in the table at the end of this guide.

Per-series emphasis

Each series builds the shared skills above, and leans into one C3 Dimension-2 disciplinary concept:

Series	Lead C3 / historical-thinking concept	Also strong on
Ancient Civilizations	Change, Continuity & Context — comparing how civilizations solved the same human problems	chronology; comprehension
Great Empires	Causation — why empires rise, expand and fall	change over time
Great Inventions	Cause & Consequence — each invention builds on the last	continuity & change
History-Changing Events	Causation & Argumentation — turning points and their long-term consequences	chronology
Legendary Explorers	Perspectives — multiple viewpoints, and the consequences of contact for peoples already there	causation & consequence

Legendary Rulers	Historical Argumentation — the sources of power and how history judges its leaders	perspectives
Lost Cities	Historical Sources & Evidence (C3 Dimension 3) — reading ruins and objects to interpret the past	chronology

What the History line does not claim

- C3 Dimension 3 (evaluating primary sources) — reached mainly by Lost Cities; other series present historical accounts rather than primary-source analysis.
- C3 Dimension 4 (taking informed action) — outside the scope of a fact-and-activity book.

Wording — ALIGNED

Because the page-by-page correlation exists (this document), each History book qualifies for:

“Aligned to the C3 Framework for Social Studies and the National Standards for History, grades 3-7.”

(Separate, unrelated to this claim: the interiors still contain British spellings — see the History Line — British-Spelling Audit — which should be fixed for the U.S. market. Spelling does not affect the alignment claim or the page numbers.)

For every book: the timeline page (chronological thinking) and the seven profile pages (historical comprehension). Discussion questions appear on the closing page of each book.
